MERICHANTS TALK.
Mr. Younger spoke briefly for the resolutions, and Mr. John Blair, president of the Wholesale Grocers' Association, addressed the committee briefly on the same line, and offered some further resolutions, almed chiefly at the Mann amendment. Mr. Blair's firm does not sell liquor, and there are sixteen other wholesale firms here in the same category, and it was on behalf of these that he spoke. He was followed by Mr. W. M. Parrish in opposition, and when he had concluded Hon. Joseph T. Lawless of Norfolk, counsel, for the retail liquor dealers of Norfolk city and county and Richmond city, began his very able address on behalf of his clients. Mr. Lawless commenced his speech by a powerful onslaught upon the Mann bill, which, he declared, was both double-barrelled and onslaught upon the Mann bill, which, he declared, was both double-barrelled and retroactive in its provisions. He charged that it was class legislation, because it permitted men who could go to Ocean View to drink at will and pleasure, and forbade the poor man in the country and the little town to have the same privileges. It permitted the Goulds and the Vanderbilts to ride in the pulace cars while the poor were not allowed to get a drink near their own homes. If the bill was to be passed, all these amend-ments should be stricken out.

REPLIES TO MERCHANTS.

Judge Mann explained his bill in detail, largely for the benefit of the wholesaie merchants who had opposed, for, he said, he was sure they were high men, and did not clearly understand it.

Judge Mann called attention to the fact that three great religious denominations in the State had endorsed his bill, and that behind it stood the church people, the women, the temperance people and a whole army of others who had expressed themselves for the bill through the Legislature. he Legislature, Judge Mann closed with a splendid an

The teachers, and pupils, too, for that matter, who wish to attend the sessions of the Conference for Education in the South will have an opportunity to do so. The School Board has decided to suspend the public schools of the city from Thurschy, April 23d, at noon, to the end of the week. The teachers will miss only the Thursday morning session of the body. The principals and teachers are delighted at the action taken by the board. The holding of this conference in Richmond is one of the most notable events in many years. It is a rare opportunity for inspiration to teachers, and the School loard is determined that they shall not miss it. The teachers, and pupils, too, for that expelled from the Produce Exchange by the Board of Managers to-day, after the investigation of charges that he had been executing orders on the floor of the Exchange for a concern that was, it is alleged, conducting a discretionary pool business.

The Produce Exchange has appointed a committee to confer with a committee of the Cotton Exchange to take concerted action against discretionary pool establishments and bucket-shops. Mr. Townsend will begin legal proceedings at once for reinstatement.

A conference of the coal dealers will be held at noon to-day at the office of the Richmond Ice Company for the consideration of certain matters, chief among which is the movement in the Legislatur to regulate the weight of coal sold by

The proposition of the Hon. T. H. Edthe House of Delegates a bill requiring dealers to give the long ton of 2,240 pounds, instead of 2,000 pounds has caused pounds, instead of 2,000 pounds has caused quite a little ripple in the local market. The majority of those who expressed themselves yesterday did not take the matter seriously, and thought a little explanation would sottle the question. They are all prepared, however, to appose the enactment of such a law, and hence a conference was suggested.

men whom he did not propose to abuse.
But he desired at once to discard the revenue feature, and to say that his bill, now an amendment to the general revenue measure, did not seek to raidy revenue.

He then proceeded to a powerful defense of the measure, which bears his name, and he said in the introduction and pressing of it, he had undertaken to do a practical thing and not to go a step shead of public sentiment. He had offered the measure before Christmas, and it was on the Senate calendar, where he let it lay to see if public sentiment would get behind it.

He contended that the great flow of petitions that had come in had shown where public sentiment was on the subject. He denied that his bill was a "rider" to the tax bill, and said it had been offered before the latter measure had been framed.

REPLIES TO MERCHANTS.
Judge Mann explained his bill in detail, largely for the benefit of the whole-sale measures that the conference at 12 o'clock to-day.

With reference to the Edwards matter

While there will hardly be anything of that sort to-day, it is whispeared that sort to-day, it is whispeared that the organization of another coal and wood exchange is likely. So far as could hence a conference a conference and could hence a conference be at the contentions and the day.

With reference to the Edwards matter itself, Mr. Landerkin expressed the opinion that it would come to nothing. Boft coal is now sold to the dealers by the ton of 2,000 pounds, and they pay a certain amount for such a ton and expect to get a certain amount for it from certain amount for such a ton and expect to get a certain amount for it from the consumer. The railroads refuse to sell it in any other way because the 2,000 pound ton is easier to calculate than the other. If they did change, however, to the long ton, they would simply charge that much more, and the price to the consumer would be indvanced accordingly. It is a question of price and not of quantity.

JUST LIKE POUND RATES.

Much the same opinion was expressed by Mr. S. H. Cottrell. It is just as if coal would be sold by the hundred pounds. Twenty hundred pounds would cost a certain amount; twenty-two hundred and forty pounds would cost a certain amount; twenty-two hundred pounds. The coal operators sell 2.40 pounds to the ton, and the merchants sell it in 2.000-ton lots. The reason for this is plain. The cars always run more or less short and there is a good deal of waste. If the merchant sold 2.20 pounds of anthracite to a ton he would run several tons short on a car load from the mines.

One of the members of the firm of P. T. Murphy & Son, spoke along the line of the others and declared that dealers would have to lose money if they sold 230 pounds of anthracite in a ton. It was the opinion of Mr. Murphy that a vigorous opposition will be presented to the bill in the Legislature.
